Exactly like him. I kept on looking at him. I gave very indignant looks once in a while, and I could see Mr. Osborne came look at me. I said that was him. I was taken up to Commissioner Houghton's room, waiting for bail.

Miss Tanzer then told of how she realized suddenly as Mr. Osborne came into Commissioner Houghton's room that he was not the man, but that she could not muster up courage to tell any one then. Mr. Marshall suggested to her counsel yesterday that it might be well for him to go over the state ment with her, in view of its many discrepancies, and not let it stand in its pre-ent form.

There seems to be no doubt that the up-state Republicans will raise no objections to the organization here having what it wants in the way of aldermanic districts.

For some time there has been much sentiment for a reduction in the size of the Board of Aldermen. At present there are seventy-three members, elected from as many districts. In addition the five Borough Presidents and the President of the Board of Aldermen have seats in that body, making a total veting strength of seventy-nine.

The Citizens Union bill would nave cut the elected membership down from seventy-three to fifty-five. The Retublican plan gives a total of sixty-

Avigno dashed a tear from his eye and walked out of the county jail to-day.

Way back in October, 1913, Rocco got into a controversy with the Standard Oil Company over a small piece of property he owned at Patchogue. He elected to defy the oil octopus with an axe, and was arrested and commanded to keep the peace. He had no bond, so he was sent to jail.

After months of eating and sleeping as a guest of Suffolk County Rocco was asked if he would be good if he would not. He gave the same reply to all inquiries of the kind for the last year and a half, but recently his appetite so improved that the county officials decided something had to be done. It ended in to-day's court order officially ousting Rocco from the jail.
